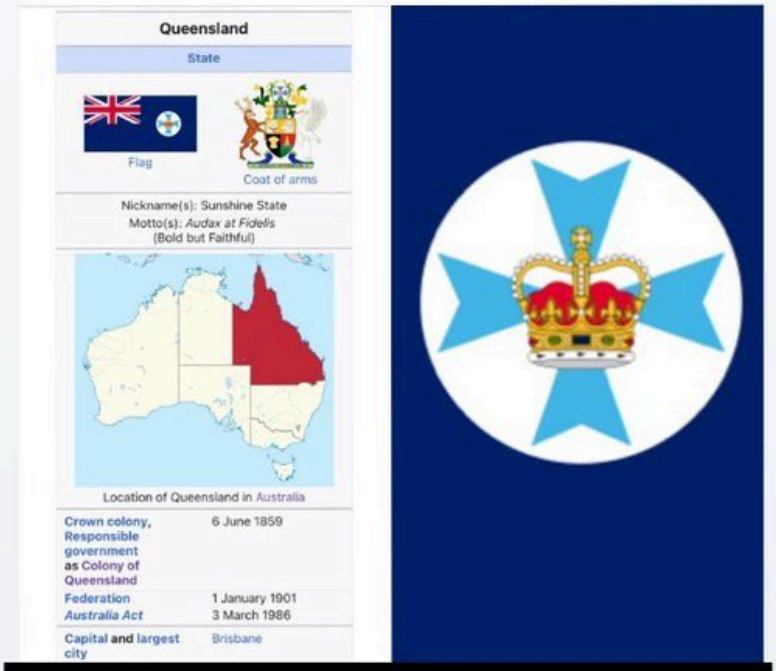
The Maltese cross as defined by the constitution of the Order of St. John remains the symbol of the Sovereign Military Order of Malta, of the Order of Saint John and its allied orders, of the Venerable Order of Saint John, and of their various service organisations.[6] Numerous other modern orders of merit have used the eight-pointed cross.[6] The British colony of Queensland, Australia, adopted the Maltese cross as the state badge and on the flag in 1876 for reasons unknown, its use continuing through to statehood.[7]



The Australian state of Queensland has featured a #maltesecross on it's flag for 145 years for 'reasons unknown' 😉
